

country because it then gets a connection back between the consumer and the payer.

Under traditional third-party coverage, basically we have always felt like, "Well, gee, the insurance company is paying the bill," so there has been unbridled consumption. If a person has a medical savings account where they can pull the funds out of their medical savings account to pay their bills, they also will have an increased tendency to be a wise consumer.

So I tell various health care groups, physicians, for instance, that quite frankly they may find that they are in a very competitive situation now. In the past when the insurance company pays all of the bills, nobody tends to look at the bills. But if the payment is coming out of the medical savings account, people will tend to look at the bills, and this is why.

Let us say we have a provider on one side of the street who charges $25 for an office visit. On the other side of the street the family practitioner charges $30. If a person is in a traditional health plan, it does not make any difference to them because somebody else is paying the bill. But if they have a medical savings account, assuming the quality is equal, they are likely to go to the provider who charges $25 instead of $30 because they get to keep the $5 difference in your plan.

So there is an incentive now for people to become wise shoppers. There is an incentive for people not to over consume, but there is a mechanism for people to get the kind of medical care that they need because there is a way to pay for it. Even managed care plans in many cases today are moving to deductibles in their plans. There needs to be a mechanism to pay that deductible or we will have a problem with people not getting the kind of care that they want.

Mr. Speaker, I would just finish by saying there are a lot of misperceptions about medical savings accounts. They are not the total solution, but many people in this country today have medical savings account plans, over 1,000 companies in this country. They are saving dollars by it, the people who have the medical savings accounts are very happy with it, and quite frankly I think we would find many people with special health needs choosing medical savings accounts. I do not think they are just for the healthy and the wealthy.
